

Homeland is looking for a Technical Operator

Homeland is a fast-growing and innovative craft brewery, located at the Marineterrein in the heart of Amsterdam. We started small in 2015, but have grown into a full-fledged brewery with capacity for 5000HL per year. We have a motivated and hard-working crew on board, working every day to create innovative craft beers and craft classics that continue to surprise customers from all over the world.

To strengthen our current brewing crew, we are looking for an enthusiastic technical operator for 36-40 hours per week.

Your tasks

- Process control: controlling, setting, operating and adjusting the canning line;
- Inspecting: carrying out periodic inspections of the equipment to prevent malfunctions;
- Problem Solving: noticing technical failures on machines, and solving these problems;
- Maintenance: independently carry out maintenance on the machines, the brewery house and the tanks in the brewery.
- Supervising: supervising repairmen and suppliers during major maintenance;
- Improvement: optimizing the brewing process and the brewery, so that we can work more efficient, safe, clean and smart;

What do you bring?

- A strong passion for craft beer;
- Minimum of 2 years' experience in a production process;
- Technical knowledge of production installations; it is an advantage if you already have experience with the technology of brewing and canning installations;
- Able to work independently and solve problems;
- Responsible, you work with attention to safety, quality and details;
- You are a team player;

What do we offer?

- A job for 36-40 hours per week within a growing, award winning craft brewery in Amsterdam;
- A close team where craftsmanship is of paramount importance;
- Varied work within a sophisticated brewery;
- Room to bring your ideas for a more effective brewery to reality;
- The space to keep learning and growing, tailored to your ambitions;
- Of course, an appropriate remuneration for the job;
